COUNTRY STILL CALLS FOR NEEDY CHILDREN

Despite Opening of Schools It Is Not Too Late for Fresh Air Outings.

GOOD CAN YET BE DONE

Lack of Funds Only Drawback in Sending More Little Folk of the Poor Out of Hot City.

A contributor who sent $50 to the Tribune Fresh Air Fund on August 29 expressed the hope in a letter accompanying the gift that it might be used for "sending children to the country this year." He evidently feared that his support of the Fresh Air work would come too late to be of practical value, so far as the work of the current season is concerned. There is no such danger; his wish has been complied with. It is doubtless a prevalent notion that Fresh Air work must of necessity cease with the arrival of September 1.

In consequence, many persons whose sympathies are with the work, but who have been abroad or out of touch with the city and its affairs during the summer, on their return to town in the fall withhold their contributions, believing that they will accomplish no good.

This is not the case. Every dollar received by the Tribune Fresh Air Fund this year will be expended for the benefit of needy children without delay. The idea that Fresh Air work must en with the coming of September is doubt less due chiefly to the fact that the publi schools reopen soon after Labor Day. is also partly due, however, to a genera feeling that the vacation season is over. Neither of these facts, however, is a Air work. In the first place, there are many children among the poor of the city whose health is such that it will not be possible for them to enter school. There are many others who would be infinitely better off in the country, building up their hodies, than in the schools, building up elopment be retarded permanently by a absence from school, for it is conceded by educational authorities that one of the most evident results of a Fresh Air out ing is an increased mental keenness in the child that enjoys the outing.

Such children as those ought to be sent spell is weighing heavily. Places can be provided where any number of them can as well as during the earlier season.

It is probable, too, that more good would result from an outing at this time than earlier. There is no pleasanter or September and October, and there is the added fact to be considered that the children would not come back to their tene ment house homes at a time when the strain of the hot weather would imme diately commence for them again.

There are many Tribune Fresh Airs now in the country. Only funds are lacking to keep sending others during the entire month of September.
